Generalized Linear Model

1998

The Generalized Linear Model (GLM) is a statistical framework that extends the linear model to accommodate non-normal distributions and link functions. It is defined by three components: the distribution, the link function, and the natural parameter.

The distribution is assumed to be a member of the exponential family, which includes the normal, binomial, and Poisson distributions. The link function connects the linear predictor to the mean of the response variable. The natural parameter is the parameter of the distribution that is linearly related to the linear predictor.

The GLM is estimated using maximum likelihood estimation (MLE). The log-likelihood function is maximized with respect to the parameters of the model. The resulting estimates are unbiased and efficient under regularity conditions.

The GLM is a powerful tool for analyzing data with non-normal responses. It is widely used in fields such as biology, psychology, and economics. The GLM provides a flexible and robust framework for modeling a wide range of data.
